CHESS SPARKS

OR

SHORT AND BRIGHT GAMES OF CHESS

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED

BY

FOR TWENTY-NINE HAPPY YEARS

THE QUEEN OF MY BOARD.

PREFACE.

A SPARK must, of course, be brief as well as bright, and so these Chess Games are limited to twenty moves before a winning position is obtained.

It may be thought that such games cannot be worth attention, because they must be necessarily more or less badly played. This may be partly true, but it is equally true that the length of a game affords no proof of the soundness of the play. A game without any mistake on either side is generally dull and uninteresting. Moreover, it may be just as useful, and sometimes nearly as difficult, to detect the error in a short game as in a long one.

Some of these games are given merely as amusing curiosities, but a large proportion of them have been played by first-class players in important Tournaments and Matches. Many are old friends, such as Anderssen's two immortal games, which no chess player will ever find tiresome; and though nearly all have been previously printed, many have been gathered from sources not readily accessible.

The first player is always denoted by White, and the second player by Black; and the Diagrams are always placed with the white pieces at the bottom.

The Chronicle of Tournaments and Matches was compiled for my own use, before meeting with Bachmann's Schachchronik in the third part of his Geistreiche Schach-partien, published at Ansbach in 1894. This is a very comprehensive record of chess events, beginning at 3000 B.C. and including the publication of most of the principal books on chess. There is also a short summary of Tournaments in the Article on Chess in the Ninth Edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica, by Mr. W. N. Potter, but it only extends to the year 1876, and does not include any Matches.

CHESS SPARKS.

This game affords the earliest instance on record of a kind of mate, of which many examples will be found in the following pages.

It was played by M. de Kermur, Sire de Légal, who was born in 1702, and at the age of 85 was still the best Chess player in France, after his pupil Philidor.

White gives Q Rook.
